Introduction

This report is based on the subject's responses on Emotional Intelligence Scale. The report is presented into 2 sections; first section provides comprehensive information about the respondent's composite Interpersonal Skills and its interpretation and the second section provides subject's detailed profile on each of the 5 dimensions/sub-facets of personality and score interpretation.

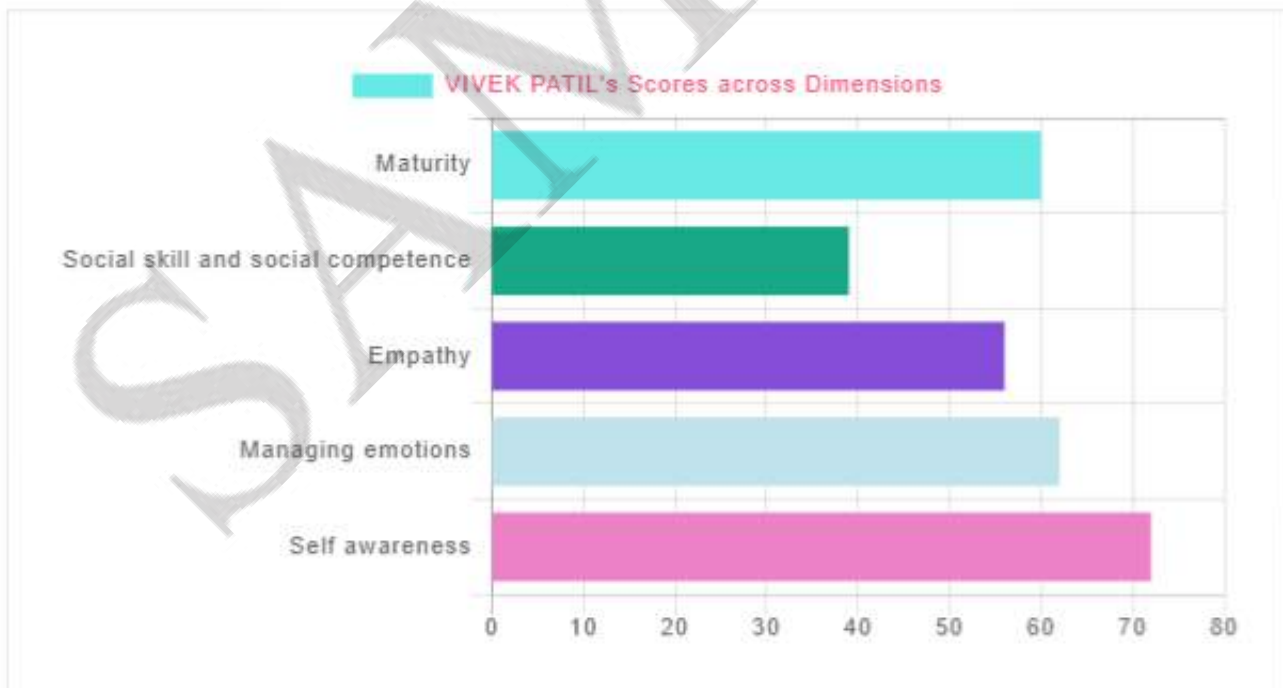

Overview of the test

The Emotional Intelligence Scale is a 80-item-self report that is used by adults to measure the ability of an individual to ensure good relationships with others and with ourselves and bring out positive outcomes. These all results in better leadership, academic performance, marriage, friendship, health and professional career. Five subscales: Self awareness, Managing emotions, Maturity, Empathy and Social skill and social competence. The researchers made a effort to interact with persons to find out how do they react to different situation demanding the control of Emotional Intelligence.

Results

TOTAL SCORE	QUALITATIVE DESCRIPTOR
289	Average

SUBSCALE	RAW SCORE	QUALITATIVE DESCRIPTOR
Maturity	60	Average
Social skill and social competence	39	Low
Empathy	56	Average
Managing emotions	62	Average
Self awareness	72	High

Increasing level of emotional intelligence (EQ) has been correlated with better results in leadership, academic performance, marriage, friendship, health and professional career. This can be involves areas such as, identifying emotions; the ability to recognize how the individual and those around them are feeling; the ability to understand complex emotions and emotional 'chains', how emotions transit from one stage to another, and managing emotions; the ability which allows the individual to manage emotions in itself and in others.

Total Score Interpretation

Average_Emotional Intelligence

The respondent has a score corresponding to the Average in Emotional Intelligence Scale. The person somehow manages to show complete confidence in doing things in which they are involved apart from being into situations which actually made it really difficult when facing intense criticism. When the person knows that everything which is happening, is under the full capability of the individual, the person manages not to lose control of their own emotions of doing work in a good state of mind. The individual always puts an absolute, clear attitude towards other people who try to make judgements over the things he/she is involved in, but extra comments don't always place a good impact on the individual emotion. Seeing anyone else with problems never really bothers the person, and they do help other people on bad days but do not completely forget about themselves. In order to maintain the balance of developing good social skills, the person always tries to follow societal rules. Through these good gestures of opening up with everyone, the personality of the individual is very acceptable in the society.
